Infantry Unit Reunited After Round-About Trip

"It was a round-about trip but well worth the effort," according to Frank H. Frohnhoefer, 1116 Hickory Ave.

A decorated veteran of World War II service, Frohnhoefer recently attended the 22nd reunion of his military unit in Wahpeton, N.D., and was reunited with several friends he had not seen since they left the service.

"And getting there was NOT half the fun," he said.

Before being reunited with his former mess sergeant and several buddies from his squad in I Company of the 164th Infantry Regiment, Frohnhoefer flew to Minneapolis, too another flight back to Fargo, N.D., and then rented a car to drive to Wahpeton.

It was well after he had bedded down for the night that the telephone jangled him out of a tired sleep.

"Frank, this is Jim." It turned out to be Jim KaraKosta from Elmhurst, Ill.

It was a voice from the past, Frohnhoefer reported later. It wasn't long before several of the former infantry buddies were deep in the business of getting acquainted again, despite the lateness of the hour.

There was Bill D. Barrett, who had come to Wahpeton from Wood River, Ill. Barrett was a member of the same rifle squad to which Frohnhoefer and KaraKosta had been assigned.

Then there was Ira A. Keeney, who lived in Wahpeton, the host city. He had been mess sergeant for I Company. There were others.

Frohnhoefer calls the Wahpeton trip a "found weekend."

He wouldn't have missed it for the world.

He blamed the confrontation at Century City largely on the failure of communication between leaders of the march and the 10,000 demonstrators.

McCABE SAID there will be monitors placed at strategic locations on a crowd-ratio basis who are trained in handling large protests.

A. L. Holiday, plant manager at the Dow Chemical Co., expressed doubts about the march, and said he feared vandalism on the property by protesters.

When Scharfman asked McCabe if he would be responsible for what the demonstrators might do either to themselves or to others, he replied that SMC was no more responsible "than a theatre owner is responsible for injuries sustained when someone yells 'fire' in his crowded theatre."

PROBLEMS Dow officials foresee are making shift changes at 3 p.m., the presence of highly flammable substances on the property, and ingress and egress of fire trucks should they be needed. Holiday pointed out that Dow has called the fire department 28 times in the last 18 months.

The hearing will resume at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow at the Torrance City Hall. Sessions are open to the public.

A Letter . . . To My Son

By Tom Rische
High School Teacher and Youth Worker

Dear Bruce,
Will your teenage years be the happiest of your life, as many adults like to think?

I doubt it. I wouldn't want to go back to high school and I couldn't find many of my friends who'd want to be 16 again either. If you talk to teenagers, most of them are straining at the leash to get out into the "real world."

As a teenager, you'll change from child to man, with all of the emotional bumps and cuts that involves. As you mature, your voice will change and squeak and embarrass you for a while before it settles down. So will some of your emotions and attitudes:

There'll be all sorts of pressures. you'll be practicing to be an adult, and practicing anything really isn't much fun, especially when you make mistakes.

Some adults like to dismiss teenage problems as silly, but a surprising number of youngsters try to kill themselves because they were stood up on a date or they failed a test. Lots of adults have forgotten what being a teenager really was like.

A person's teenage years usually aren't the happiest because they are not the most successful. Hopefully, as an adult, you'll go on to much better things. (There's nothing sadder than the girl whose peak in life was reached at 17 when she was Homecoming Queen or the guy who at 45 is still bragging about scoring a touchdown when he was in high school).

Yours for happiness,
Your dad
